

November 13, 1998

Having coexisted peacefully for several years, the Empire of Diking and Octan have decided to enter into an alliance and agree to the following.

Section One

The parties agree to unconditionally support each other while conducting defensive wars.

Section Two

The parties agree to share all intelligence information that they have gathered. Octan agrees to build a fiber optic and wireless intranet to provide secure transmission of this information and other communications. Octan Prime will have supreme administrative authority of the network.

Section Three

The parties agree to share all military and scientific technology once they are in production stage. It is also agreed that the parties will not improve on the other's technology once it is shared without the other's consent. The country receiving a technology from the country which developed it that the developing country has deemed secret will not divulge this technology to other countries or entities.

Section Four

All weapons, shield, and sensor platforms, etc. are the property of the nation that discovered and or built it and may not be reproduced without the express written authorization of the discovering nation.

Section Five

The currencies of Diking and its commonwealths and the currencies of Octan and its commonwealths shall be recognized by the treasuries of each nation and its commonwealths and be exchangeable on a ratio of one unit to one unit. Octan and Diking shall recognize the values placed on precious metals by Eilos and Octan to be the price that they will use for trade between each other.

Section Six

Any person or persons who violate any of the terms of this alliance shall be charged with treason in the country where he holds citizenship.

Section Seven

This alliance may be subject to change at any time as long as both parties agree to the amendment.

Adm. Wallard
Secretary of Foreign Affairs Nernis
Emperor Corey I

Corey II